WASM EDUCATION PROGRAM

Sleep Medicine is an integral part of Medicine focused on providing appropriate care to patients with sleep-related disorders and improving their quality of life. It is an independent specialty, not a subspecialty of another field of medicine. Before practicing Sleep Medicine, physicians must receive specialized training and be certified by formal evaluation in order to demonstrate their knowledge and competence. Before taking the certification examination, a candidate must document appropriate education and training in the field. WASM has developed minimum eligibility criteria required for taking its specialty examination. WASM will also offer a curriculum, educational materials, criteria for minimum training requirements, and board examination materials in collaboration with national sleep societies.
